A Discussion on the Value of Automation in the Health Service

Organized by D. A. J. Tyrrell, F.R.S.
Notice to Authors

The editors of Proceedings of the Royal Society, Series B, wish to draw authors' attention to the fact that short papers (a few pages in length) are welcome and will be given expeditious treatment. Papers should normally be submitted via a Fellow of the Royal Society, but where this is difficult authors are invited to send manuscripts direct to the Executive Secretary.

The Royal Society
6 Carlton House Terrace
London SW1Y 5AG
A DISCUSSION ON THE VALUE OF AUTOMATION IN THE HEALTH SERVICE

ORGANIZED BY D. A. J. TYRRELL, F.R.S.

(Discussion held 31 May 1973 – MSS received 21 June 1973)

[Plates 39 to 41]

CONTENTS

D. A. J. TYRRELL, F.R.S.
Introductory remarks 349

ADVANCED TECHNOLOGY IN THE HOSPITAL LABORATORY

F. L. MITCHELL
Equipment for clinical chemistry and its evaluation 351

D. W. NEILL
Automated clinical chemistry and haematology in a hospital region 361

M. J. R. HEALY
Handling and interpreting multiple results 369

DISCUSSION
Barbara E. Clayton 374

COMPUTERS AND THE ORGANIZATION OF MEDICAL CARE

M. J. R. HEALY
What computers can and cannot do 375

L. E. BÖTTGER
The Stockholm County Council’s medical information service 379

E. C. COLES, L. J. BEILIN, C. J. BULPIT, C. T. DOLLERY, B. F. JOHNSON,
C. MEARNS, A. D. MUNRO-FAURE AND S. C. TURNER
Computer-based records in the clinic (a) 387

J. J. BROWN
Computer-based records in the clinic (b) 399

J. A. BALDWIN
Linked record medical information systems 403

DISCUSSION
D. White, C. T. Dollery, J. R. Philp 415

COMPUTER-ASSISTED DIAGNOSIS AND PATTERN RECOGNITION

W. I. CARD
The computing approach to clinical diagnosis 421

F. T. DE DOMBAL
Surgical diagnosis assisted by a computer 433

D. RUTOVITZ
Pattern recognition by computer 441
Contents

P. W. Macfarlane and T. D. V. Lawrie
Automated e.c.g. interpretation in the National Health Service 455

Discussion
J. J. Brown, D. B. James, J. C. A. Raison 468

G. M. Bull
Advanced technology – research and the future 473