FOOD TECHNOLOGY
IN THE 1980s

This Royal Society symposium on ‘food technology in the 1980s’ recognized the important contribution food science and technology has made so far to the feeding of our ever growing urban population. A truly interdisciplinary scientific approach is needed encompassing among others nutrition, biochemistry, microbiology and physical chemistry to advance the multitude of processing and preservation techniques, satisfying at the same time the socio-economic, toxicological, and legal constraints placed on any completely new or improved technology today and more so in the future.

The innovative culinary art and craft of great chefs of the 19th century has moved from the restaurant to the food factory. All the large-scale processing techniques discussed must therefore satisfy the visual, olfactory, gustatory and tactile human senses to find consumer acceptability. Added to this must be suitable transport and storage conditions as a vital part in the chain linking food all the way from being grown on the farm via the processor and distributor to the household table.

Every aspect of this food chain is reviewed and discussed in this book.

CONTENTS

Fasham, M. J. R. & Platt, T. pages 355–370
· Photosynthetic response of phytoplankton to light: a physiological model

Pinder, A. C. & Palmer, A. R. 371–396
· Mechanical properties of the frog ear: vibration measurements under free- and closed-field acoustic conditions

Kuster, J. E., French, A. S. & Sanders, E. J. 397–412
· The effects of microtubule dissociating agents on the physiology and cytolgy of the sensory neuron in the femoral tactile spine of the cockroach, Periplaneta americana L. [Plates 1–3]

Gordon-Weeks, P. R. & Jones, D. H. 413–422
· Binding and uptake of concanavalin A into rat brain synaptosomes: evidence for synaptic vesicle recycling. [Plates 1 and 2]

Edmonds, D. T. 423–438
· A model of sodium channel inactivation based upon the modulated blocker

Llewellyn, J. 439–446
· Sperm transfer in the monogenean gill parasite Gastrocotyle trachuri. [Plate 1]

Mitchell, Mary R., Powell, T., Terrar, D. A. & Twist, V. W. 447–469
· Characteristics of the second inward current in cells isolated from rat ventricular muscle

Grossberg, S. 471–473
· Adaptation and gain normalization: a comment on Ullman & Schechtman (1982)

Indexes 475–478
